Family Resources Degree Program

Family Resources (FAMR) is a Bachelor’s of Science degree program that provides students with a comprehensive, ecological systems-based program of study in human development, family development, and family resource management. The FAMR curriculum provides students with a multitude of experiences through coursework and off-campus activities to give them the knowledge and professional skills needed for careers in family/human services.

FAMR Notes:
- There are two options to fulfill the language requirement:
  - Complete a four-semester sequence (usually 101, 102, 201, and 202) in a single language.
  - Complete a two-semester sequence (101 and 102) in a single language and two approved culture-related courses.
- All FAMR majors are required to complete a one-semester 180 hours (12 hours per week for 15 weeks) internship in their last semester or summer before graduation.
- Graduates are prepared for the following positions:
  - Family service agencies
  - Family life education programs
  - Parenting education programs
  - Children/youth programs
  - Gerontology programs
  - Child care/early childhood education centers
  - Consumer affairs/consumer relations
  - Other family/human service positions
- There are two student organizations that are available to FAMR students:
  - Friends of the Family – A student-led organization open to anyone who has an interest in families.
  - Phi Upsilon Omicron – A National Honor Society in Family and Consumer Sciences to which students who meet certain academic criteria may be invited.
