Japanese "Red Crowned" Crane

The Japanese Red Crowned Crane is considered the "Bird of Happiness" and can live up to 1000 years. This bird a sign for good luck and it carries the souls of the dead to paradise. "Ori" means to fold and "Kami" means paper.

Sadako Sasaki

Visitors to the Peace Memorial Park will see brightly colored cranes everywhere.

These paper cranes are a symbol of peace.

Sadako was 2 years old when the Hiroshima bomb fell.

10 years after the Atomic bomb she died from leukemia.

Sadako's death triggered a campaign to build a monument to pray for world peace.

For my wedding, I folded 1000 cranes and my husband folded 1 crane to promote patience and commitment to the marriage. The cranes were folded on gold paper and turned into
Let's Get Started

Step 1:

Find a magazine or used paper and cut out a square.
Step 2:

Fold the top corner of the paper down to the bottom corner to make a triangle. Then fold into a smaller Triangle.
Step 3: Make a box
Step 4: Fold Flaps

Fold the flaps to the center on both sides.
Step 5: Open Flaps Into a Kite

Open the upper most flap and fold it into a kite.
Step 6: Fold Flaps

Find the open legs and fold flaps into the center.
Step 7: Fold Paper

Fold paper so your model looks like the following picture below.
Step 8: Fold Legs Up

Fold the legs up and open crane. Bend over one side for the head of the crane.
Create a Remember This Jar

On a piece of paper a "Blue Sky" positive memory that happened to you on a weekly basis and fold it into a crane for good luck. On New Year's Eve, open the cranes and display all your "Blue Sky" memories throughout the year!

- Favorite Memory
- Positive thing that happened.
- Special Occasion
- "Excepted Blue Sky Moment"
- Milestone
Thank you for listening!
